

How to arrive to Padova

Padova is strategically located at the heart of the Veneto region. The city's railway station and the nearby airports in Venice, Treviso, Verona and Bologna provide excellent connections with the main European cities and further afield.

The city's closest airport is Marco Polo Airport in Venice.

At the following link you could find the main direct flights from Europe and some suggested connecting flights from other locations outside Europe.

Kindly note that, for people travelling from the US, there is a direct flight via New York provided by Delta Airlines. People travelling from Asia could instead easily take a connecting flight to Venice from one of the main European airports (e.g. via Frankfurt Am Main).

To reach Padova from Venice, you could take a taxi (the average cost is 100 euro and the trip will take around 40 minutes) or book a AirService shuttle bus, a collective shuttle bus service, which picks you up at your airport and takes you comfortably to the hotel, and vice-versa. For additional information on this service, please visit the following link.